

TEENAGE CANCER TRUST PETITION

Every day in the UK, up to six teenagers or young adults will find out they have cancer. Teenage Cancer Trust is a charity making sure that young people with cancer get the best possible support. The charity funds specialist teenage cancer units in NHS hospitals – units where teenagers can get on with being teenagers while receiving the best possible medical treatment. Teenage Cancer Trust aims to open enough units by 2012, to give every teenage cancer patient easy access to the specialist support they provide - no matter where they live.

Teenage Cancer Trust offers an exciting and vibrant education programme where young people learn about the signs of cancer and what is like to have cancer as a teenager. We want to teach the next generation not to be afraid to talk about this disease. Learn about the signs and symptoms and understand about the different types of cancer, treatments and side effects that they have. Understand what it's like for a friend or loved one to live with cancer and know how you can support them in the right way.

We, the undersigned, want a speaker from Teenage Cancer Trust to visit our school

..... so we can find out more about teenage cancer.
